

Art historian and mother, Deepti Shankar owns a toy company called Earthentree that provides eco-friendly, toxin-free wooden toys colored by vegetable dyes that are handmade by an artisan community in India with whom Earthentree is intimately tied, paying fair wages and taking good care of each artisan. Ranging in price from $6 to $40, there is something for every budget. These aren't just toys. They are works of art, and something to save and pass down to future children.

At checkout, please include the name of your school or a school you'd like to help out and Earthentree will write a check to that school in the amount of 10% of your order. Please include your name and address.

Choose from a vast array of award-winning, innovative toys by Kushies@ Zolo@. Kushies@ Zolo@ toys are designed to encourage self-expression, build self-confidence, and inspire the imagination. And they're just plain cute.

Use the code dcr10 for a 10% discount on any order from KushiesOnline.com.

Where Do I Live is a game that helps kids learn distinction, classification, and recollection skills. Recommended ages: 4 and up.

Green Toys is a company that uses recycled plastic milk containers to make eco-friendly toys. I particularly love this Indoor Gardening Kit ($29.99) for being educational as well as fun.

Ecotronic toys are an eco-friendly toy line that are battery-free and kid-powered. They are operated by winding or shaking. In addition, the packaging contains no plastic or wire ties, and it's made from 100% recycled material. I don't know about you, but they had me at "no wire ties" — the bane of my existence every Christmas morning! Check the full toy line up with Eco-Ducks, the Eco-Rocket, the Penguin Torch, the Eco-Phone, and more. There are toys